Significance of the Academic Costume

The significance of the academic costume is determined especially by the sleeves and hoods.

Doctors wear the round bell sleeve; the gown is faced down the front and barred on the sleeves with black velvet or color indicating the degree; the doctor's hood is large. The doctor may choose to wear the gold tassel on the cap.

Masters wear the long, closed sleeve, with a slit near the upper part of the arm; the master's hood is of more moderate size.

Bachelors wear the long or pointed sleeve. The color of the tassel indicates whether the degree is in the field of arts (white), fine arts (brown), music (pink), or science (golden yellow).

HONORARY DOCTORAL DEGREE

Tom Lantos

Tom Lantos is the only Holocaust survivor ever elected to the United States Congress. He is one of five Hungarian survivors of the Holocaust whose stories are featured in Steven Spielberg's Academy Award–winning documentary The Last Days. He was elected to the House of Representatives in 1980 and is now serving his eleventh term in Congress. He represents parts of California's San Francisco and San Mateo Counties. In January 2001 he was elected the ranking Democratic member of the House International Relations Committee, the leader of House Democrats on foreign policy issues. He is a recognized expert on foreign affairs and a leading champion of human rights known for his support for religious freedom, the right of political dissent, freedom of the press, and respect for individual rights.

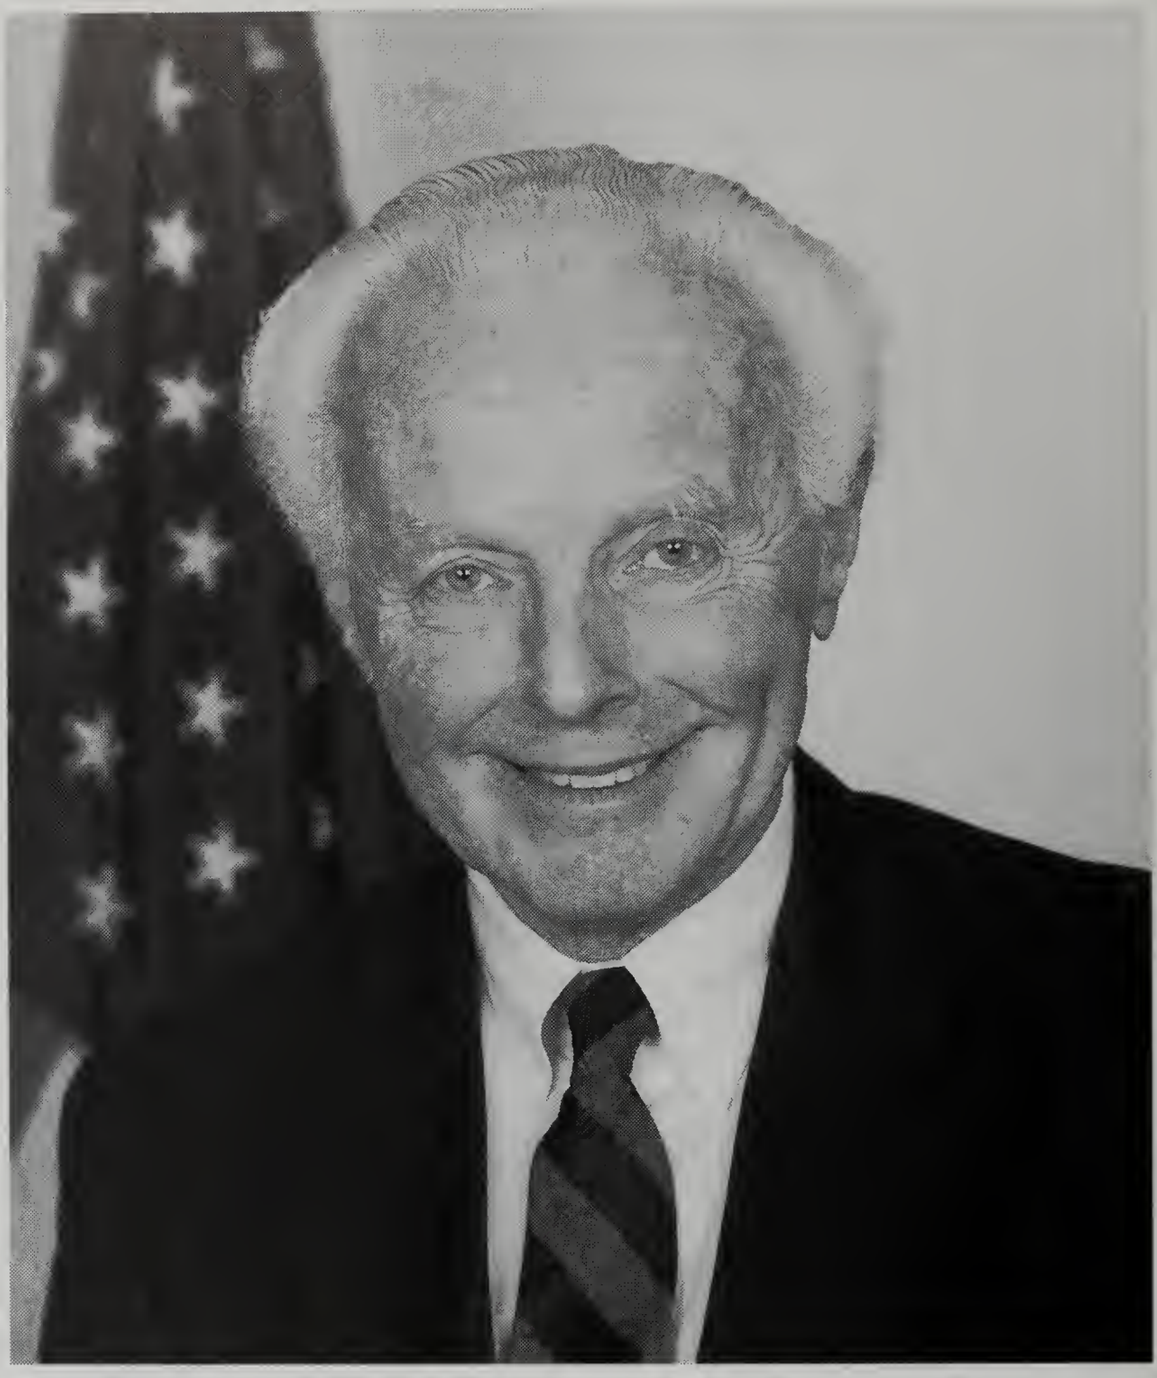
Tom Lantos was born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1928. He was ten years old when he bought his first newspaper because he was struck by its headline—"Hitler Marches into Austria!"

In March of 1944, when Tom Lantos was sixteen years old, Nazi troops occupied Hungary. With the German military came the infamous Adolf Eichmann with orders to exterminate the Jewish population of Hungary. By the end of that summer most of the Jews outside Budapest had been sent to the gas chambers of Auschwitz, which ultimately claimed some 600,000 of the 700,000 Jews in Hungary.

Shortly after the occupation, Tom Lantos was sent to a forced labor battalion north of Budapest, where Jewish teenagers were charged with maintaining a key bridge on the Budapest–Vienna rail line. He managed to escape from the camp but was caught and severely beaten. He doubted that he would survive. Fearing for his life and convinced he had nothing to lose, he attempted another escape, and this time he succeeded in reaching Budapest.

An aunt, his only relative who survived the war, was in a Wallenberg "safe house"—one of the apartments Swedish diplomat Raoul Wallenberg had rented and placed under Swedish diplomatic protection at the request of the United States and with American financial assistance. In addition to providing limited protection for Jews who were able to find access to these safe houses, Wallenberg created and issued shutzpasse (protective passports) to Jews. He passed these out to Jews in an effort to save them from extermination camps. Through his efforts, tens of thousands of Hungarian Jews were saved. For Tom Lantos, Wallenberg has been a beacon—a shining example of what human conduct ought to have been in that darkest of times.

Raoul Wallenberg was arrested by Soviet troops in January 1945, just a few days after the Red Army liberated Budapest from German occupation.



Wallenberg was never again seen outside prison. There were numerous reports of sightings of the Swede by other prisoners, but there have been few credible reports since about 1980. Despite repeated requests to Soviet officials for information and the establishment of several investigative commissions, the full story of Wallenberg's disappearance is still not known.

Tom Lantos began studies at the University of Budapest in the fall of 1946, but in the summer of 1947, as a result of his excellent essay on Franklin Delano Roosevelt, he was awarded a scholarship from Hillel: The Foundation for Jewish Campus Life to study in the United States. He studied economics at the University of Washington in Seattle, where he received his BA in 1949 and his MA in 1950.

It was also in 1950 that he married his childhood sweetheart, Annette Tillemann. Like her husband, she was born in Budapest and lost most of her family in the Holocaust. She and her mother survived the nine months of Nazi occupation in a diplomatic residence on the city's outskirts. In December 1944, at the height of the battle between Nazi and Soviet forces for control of the city, Annette, her mother, and a few others were able to reach Switzerland because of a general diplomatic agreement Wallenberg negotiated with German authorities. She remained for a year with friends and attended school. After receiving a letter from her friend Tom Lantos, Annette—alone and only fourteen years of age—made a ten-day journey by bus from Switzerland to Budapest. Two years after Tom Lantos arrived in the United States, Annette Tillemann joined him, and they were married in the summer of 1950.

That fall at the University of California, Berkeley, Tom Lantos began studies for a PhD in economics, which he completed in 1953. At the same time he also started teaching at San Francisco State University, beginning a thirty-year academic career. In addition to teaching, he organized the study abroad program of the California State University system, pioneered educational television programs in the Bay Area, began the economics department at the Bank of America, and served as president of the Millbrae, California, school board. Tom Lantos also had a strong commitment to political participation, and he was actively involved in political campaigns and served as a foreign policy advisor.

When elected to Congress in November 1980, Tom Lantos was the only Democrat to defeat an un-indicted Republican in the year of the Reagan Republican landslide. His first legislation was a bill to make Raoul Wallenberg an honorary citizen of the United States. Wallenberg was the second foreigner after Sir Winston Churchill to be so honored. It was an appropriate twist to give U.S. citizenship to this man who, at the request of the United States, saved the lives of tens of thousands by giving them "Swedish passports." At a Rose Garden ceremony in October 1981, President Ronald Reagan signed the legislation honoring Wallenberg.

More than with any other issue, Congressman Lantos' career has been identified with fostering respect for human rights. Shortly after his election to Congress, he founded the Congressional Human Rights Caucus to focus legislative attention on human rights abuses around the world. He has been the leading advocate in Congress for human rights, calling attention to literally thousands of individual cases of torture, denial of rights, and official abuse, and he has been an advocate for the rights of persecuted racial, religious, and ethnic minorities. He is a founding cochairman of the Congressional Task Force Against Anti-Semitism. He was a leading congressional voice in winning approval for the BYU Jerusalem Center, invited the Dalai Lama for the first meeting with U.S. government officials in Washington, and led the fight to prosecute Nazi war criminals still living in the United States and abroad.

From 1989 to 1990, Congressman Lantos conducted the congressional investigation of waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement at the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). As a result of his investigation, an independent counsel secured more than a dozen guilty pleas or verdicts. Legislation was adopted changing HUD policies and practices, and government-wide procedures were modified to deal with potential problems of fraud and abuse. Former senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin called this investigation "one of the best—if not the best—congressional investigation of waste and mismanagement."

Tom and Annette Lantos are the parents of two daughters—Annette Tillemann-Dick and Katrina Lantos-Swett. Annette is married to Timber Dick, an independent businessman in Denver, Colorado, and they are the parents of ten children. Katrina is married to Richard Nelson Swett, the current United States ambassador to Denmark and a former member of Congress from New Hampshire. They are the parents of seven children.

For his ongoing dedication and public service and for his contributions as a champion of human rights, religious freedom, the right of political dissent, freedom of the press, and respect for individual rights, Brigham Young University is pleased to confer upon Tom Lantos the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa.

HONORARY DOCTORAL DEGREE

John W. Gallivan

John W. Gallivan, publisher emeritus of The Salt Lake Tribune, has an uncomplicated view of public service. "It all goes back to the second great commandment," he says: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

As one of Utah's great visionary leaders for more than sixty-five years, John Gallivan has played a major role in the development of Salt Lake City and the state he loves. And although he admits that a prospering community is good for business—especially newspapers—he says the motive behind his years of service has not been growth but love—love for his neighbors and love for the beauties and natural wonders of Utah.

Born in June 1915 to Daniel and Frances Wilson Gallivan in Park City, John Gallivan can still see the old, boarded-up mining town. It was a town on the verge of extinction. Today it is a different world, not because of the treasures within the town's mines but because of the silvery flakes that fall from the sky each winter.

Even as a young man John Gallivan knew the potential of Utah's snow and what it could mean to the state. But before he could ever begin promoting Utah's ski industry or the idea of the Winter Olympics coming to Salt Lake City, John Gallivan had a family commitment to keep.

Upon the death of his mother, the five-year-old John Gallivan was adopted by his mother's half-sister, Jennie Judge Kearns, the widow of Senator Thomas Kearns and the owner of The Salt Lake Tribune. Until John Gallivan graduated in 1937 from Notre Dame University, the Kearns Mansion on South Temple—now the Governor's Mansion—was officially "home."

The Kearns children, who were all married when John Gallivan came to the house, had little interest in the newspaper business. John Gallivan, who had majored in English at Notre Dame and worked as a student for The Chicago Tribune, found the newspaper business very interesting. So when The Chicago Tribune offered him a full-time job upon graduation, he was elated.

His Aunt Jennie, however, was not. Her words went something like this, John Gallivan recalls: "I didn't educate you to work for The Chicago Tribune. You come home."

"I had no choice but to come back to Salt Lake City," laughs John Gallivan without resentment. "In fact, I often tell young people now that if you want to become a publisher, arrange to be left on the doorstep of the lady who owns the newspaper."

It was then—at the hands of John Fitzpatrick, publisher at the time of The Salt Lake Tribune—that John Gallivan's education really began. The publisher first assigned his young English major to work as a bookkeeper. "He knew I didn't know a debit from a credit," says John Gallivan. "He was educating me."

By assigning him to work in every department of the newspaper, John Fitzpatrick taught John Gallivan other lessons as well. "John's philosophy was, 'If it's good for Utah, the Tribune is for it.' He was the prime mover of many great causes. He taught me that the paper should not be content to just sit back and comment on the news but should take a leadership position."

From 1948 to 1960 John Gallivan was the assistant publisher of the Tribune and the secretary of the Kearns-Tribune Corporation. In 1960 he was named publisher of The Salt Lake Tribune and president of the Newspaper Agency Corporation. That same year he was appointed president of Silver King Mining Company, a position he still holds.

From 1969 to 1987 he was president and director of the Pacific Northwest Newspaper Association, as well as serving as chairman of the Utah-Idaho-Spokane Associated Press Members' Association from 1962 to 1963 and from 1976 to 1977. Regarded as one of the state's premier communications statesmen, he helped lay the groundwork for the cable television industry as cofounder in 1969 of Tele-Communications, Inc. (TCI), now part of AT&T. In addition, he served as the vice president and director of TeleMation (electronic manufacturing and television productions) from 1969 to 1986.

One year after being named publisher of the Tribune, John Gallivan became co-organizer with the late James E. Hogle of the Salt Lake Downtown Planning Association. It is through this association that John Gallivan believes he has given his most productive service to the community. "In the 1960s the average visitor's stay in Salt Lake City was less than one day. Utah's annual tourism revenue was about $200 million. There were only about 700 decent hotel rooms in the city, and very few in the ski resorts.

"The association's master plan built the Salt Palace, which has made Salt Lake City one of the great convention centers in the United States. Worldwide publicity generated by Salt Lake's Olympic bid, starting in 1967, has established Utah as a world-class ski area. Salt Lake City and its ski resorts have over 18,000 hotel rooms. Park City is now Utah's wealthiest per capita community. Tourism is now one of Utah's largest industries, accounting for more than $4 billion in annual revenue."

John Gallivan's desire to better the city he had grown to love did not stop with this one association, however. He has served as chairman of the board of trustees for the National Citizens Conference on State Legislatures; a member of the steering committee for the Utah Agenda for the '80s; president of the Utah Symphony; a trustee of Westminster College; chairman of the executive committee and board of the University of Utah Hospital; chairman of the Planning and Construction Committee for the Salt Palace Convention Center and arena; and chairman of the planning and construction committee for Symphony Hall, the Capitol Theatre, and the Salt Lake Art Center; as well as a member of the Utah Statehood Centennial Commission. He has served as director of the Utah Zoological Society since 1955.

He is the cofounder of Ski Utah; Travel Utah, which is now the state's Tourist Council; the University of Utah Intermountain Organ Bank; and the University of Utah Hospital Foundation. He was also the cofounder of Pro-Utah—an industrial development organization. Most recently he became cofounder of the Crusade for the Homeless.

He has received honorary doctorates from the University of Utah, Southern Utah University, and Westminster College. He has been recognized as a Giant in Our City by the Greater Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce and has received the University of Utah's Service to Journalism Award. In 1998 he received a papal decoration as a Knight of St. Gregory the Great. Most recently he became the fourteenth inductee in the University of Utah's David Eccles School of Business Hall of Fame, an award granted to leaders whose contributions to Utah industry make them models for students.

John Gallivan and his wife, Grace Mary Ivers, who passed away in June 2000, are the parents of one daughter, Gay, who is married to Edward J. McDonough, and three sons: Timothy Gallivan, who is married to Pam Kray; John W. Gallivan, Jr., who is married to Stephanie Selbert; and Michael D. Gallivan, who is married to Sharee Jack.

John Gallivan has been described as a "case study" of the type of individual who builds communities. Through his efforts Salt Lake City and the state of Utah have become the destinations he knew they could become. For more than half a century John Gallivan has been at the heart of many important projects and issues facing this state: urban renewal, tax reform, the Winter Olympics, and now the homeless plight of some Utah citizens. The plaza on 200 South between Main and State in Salt Lake City, named in his honor, will remind generations to come of the key role played by this man who truly has loved his neighbors more than himself. For his lifetime contributions to the state of Utah and for his tireless leadership in the field of communications, Brigham Young University is pleased to confer upon John William Gallivan the degree of Doctor of Public Service, honoris causa.

HONORARY DOCTORAL DEGREE

Joseph B. Wirthlin

Joseph B. Wirthlin is a humble, gentle, quiet man of God in whom there is no guile. A wise steward, a steadfast Saint, and a man of faith, action, and indomitable will, Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin has labored tirelessly for thirty years as a general officer of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Since October 1986 he has served as a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, called to serve as a special witness of Jesus Christ to all the world. His life reflects the love of God in the service he renders to all. He lifts people, as children of God, to be true to their divine heritage.

Joseph B. Wirthlin was born in Salt Lake City on June 11, 1917, the eldest of five children in the family of Joseph L. and Madeline Bitner Wirthlin. He was a well-rounded student, earning good grades while also refining his singing voice and developing athletic abilities. The Wirthlin children learned to work in their father's wholesale food business.

In his youth Joseph fulfilled an Aaronic Priesthood assignment that profoundly shaped his future, a defining moment he described in these words: "How well I remember my father, the bishop of our ward, filling my small red wagon with food and clothing and then directing me—as a deacon in the Church—to pull the wagon behind me and visit the homes of the needy in our ward. . . . Those were the days of the Great Depression, and many families were suffering." An acute awareness of the needy—awakened that day—has stayed with Elder Wirthlin all his life.

Young Joseph became an Eagle Scout. He sang in operettas in elementary and junior high school. He played baseball as a boy and football in high school and college, eventually earning a starting position as a halfback at the University of Utah. On the advice of his father, Joseph gave up playing football and put his senior year of college on hold to accept a mission call to the German/Austrian Mission, where he served in the late 1930s. With World War II looming, few listened to young Elder Wirthlin's message. Though the work was slow and often discouraging, he served with characteristic determination, fulfilling his commitment to do the Lord's work.

Upon his return he graduated from the University of Utah in business administration. He met and married Elisa Young Rogers, falling in love with this bright, beautiful young woman who impressed him with her sterling character. Together, Elder and Sister Wirthlin have raised eight children—seven daughters and one son—all accomplished individuals whose successful lives honor their worthy parents. The Wirthlins now have forty-six grandchildren and seventeen great-grandchildren. Next month, Joseph and Elisa will celebrate sixty years of gloriously growing older together.

After his mission, because his father had been called to the Presiding Bishopric, Joseph was entrusted with the heavy responsibility of running the family business. Joseph's twelve- and fourteen-hour work days were often followed by Church meetings in the evening. An early riser, Elder Wirthlin's vigorous work ethic, combined with his talent for organization, brought him success. He established a spotless reputation for honesty. His integrity earned him such respect that his peers elected him president of a Utah food purveyors trade association. Despite his demanding schedule, with constant support from his wife, Joseph stayed close to his children through judicious use of lunch hours at home, by working with them in the family business, and through drive-time chats going to and from activities.

Always tenacious in carrying out any Church assignment, Joseph was called first as a counselor in the bishopric of his ward and then as bishop. Ward members remember his strong testimony of the Savior; his unflinching obedience; his giving, tender heart; his kindness toward the humble, the lonely, and the neglected; his caring response to the widows, the poor, and the needy; his organizational skills and able administration. He knew the needs of his flock and inspired his ward members to meet those needs.

He stayed close to the youth. He encouraged young women to get an education and to marry in the temple. Speaking often of his own missionary service, he inspired young men to go on missions.

After brief service on the high council of the Salt Lake Bonneville Stake, Elder Wirthlin served as a counselor in a stake presidency. In 1971 he was called as first counselor in the Sunday School general presidency. Four years later he was called to full-time Church service as an Assistant to the Twelve. In 1976 he was called to the First Quorum of the Seventy.

Elder Wirthlin's first assignment as a General Authority took him back to Europe, where he had served as a young missionary. There he was area supervisor until 1978. Upon his return to Church headquarters, he served as executive administrator for the southeastern U.S. and the Caribbean. While still based in Salt Lake City, he became executive administrator for Brazil in 1982. During these years, while traveling extensively, he also held assignments as managing director of the Melchizedek Priesthood Committee and the Military Relations Committee and priesthood advisor to the Relief Society.

Returning to his beloved Europe in 1984, Elder Wirthlin served as area president, directing Church affairs throughout the continent, the British Isles, Ireland, and Africa. In 1986 he came home to Salt Lake to serve as a member of the Presidency of the Seventy. Until his call to the Quorum of the Twelve, he held assignments as executive director of the Curriculum Department and editor of Church magazines.

As an apostle, Elder Wirthlin has served on the Church Board of Education, as a trustee of Brigham Young University, and as a member of the Leadership Training Committee. He currently serves as a member of the Missionary Executive Council, the General Welfare Services Committee, and the Area Committee. He is chairman of the Boundary and Leadership Change Committee and supervises area presidencies in the central and eastern U.S. and Canada, including the Caribbean.

After the 1985 special fast to assist famine victims in Ethiopia, the Welfare Executive Committee, under the direction of the First Presidency, organized in 1986 a subcommittee to determine how the Church could respond to human suffering around the world. With his tender heart, his profound understanding of charity as the pure love of Christ, his management experience in food distribution, and his broad understanding of Church administration, Elder Wirthlin was called to serve as the Humanitarian Service Committee's first chairman. He has guided the development of the Church's humanitarian program from modest beginnings to become one of the most respected charitable organizations in the world today.

Those touched by his personal service number in the thousands. Those blessed by his able, devoted administration of Church humanitarian service number in the millions, including victims of poverty, war, famine, sickness, and natural disaster who will never know his name, which is just as he would have it. Orphans have been clothed, fed, warmed and loved; freshwater wells have been dug in African villages and Mexican pueblos; seed potatoes have been improved in Belarus; orchards have been planted in North Korea; an ambulance has been shipped to the Republic of Georgia; helicopters have plucked flood victims from trees in Mozambique; and grain from Church farms in England has been shipped to feed yet another generation of famine victims in Ethiopia. Just this year, earthquake victims in India and El Salvador have been sheltered, fed, and helped to reestablish their communities.

Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin has served God with remarkable devotion to serving his fellow beings. Whether by nurturing their physical needs or by nourishing their spiritual hunger with the good word of God, Elder Wirthlin has been feeding the Lord's sheep throughout most of his extraordinary life. As we commend his enduring service today, Brigham Young University is pleased to confer upon Joseph Bitner Wirthlin the degree of Doctor of Christian Service, honoris causa.

PRESIDENTIAL CITATION

Lloyd D. George

Lloyd D. George was raised in Nevada and has been a judge there for approximately thirty-seven years. His early years were spent in Las Vegas, where he attended elementary and secondary schools. He was class president and then student-body president of Las Vegas High School. He had his own radio program, Teen Town of the Air, broadcast from the only radio station in Las Vegas at the time, KENO.

Through high school, Judge George worked at the Bank of Nevada and became well acquainted with banks and banking. Among many assignments, he was given an interesting responsibility for such a young man. Because there was no armored car service available, he was, at age fourteen, commissioned by the bank to pick up silver dollars and currency sent through the Post Office by the Federal Reserve and bring it by taxi to the bank. Eventually, the weight became too much for a taxi, and so a flatbed truck was used to haul the money. Young Lloyd would sit on the back of the truck on stacks of bags full of silver dollars with his arms full of currency (sometimes hundreds of thousands of dollars) and deliver the money to the side door of the bank, where tellers would help carry it into the bank.

Upon graduation from high school in 1948, Lloyd enrolled at Brigham Young University, where he eventually served as student-body president. Before graduating from BYU in 1955 with a degree in business management, Lloyd served as a missionary among the Oneida Indians in Wisconsin. After completing his undergraduate studies, Lloyd graduated as a fighter pilot in the United States Air Force and was assigned to the Strategic Air Command.

After completing his military service, Lloyd was admitted to Boalt Hall School of Law, University of California, Berkeley, where he served on the moot court board. Upon graduating in 1961, he returned to Nevada, worked in a law office, and eventually organized his own law firm. Before being appointed as a federal district judge in 1984 by President Ronald Reagan, Judge George served for ten years as a United States bankruptcy judge and was widely recognized as one of the finest bankruptcy judges in the country. He is a fellow in the American College of Bankruptcy and the National Bankruptcy Conference, a select national group of some sixty professors, practitioners, and judges.

Since his appointment to the Federal District Court, Judge George has served in a number of very significant positions within the judicial branch. He has been a member of the board of directors of the Federal Judicial Center, the research arm of the federal judiciary. Judge George has served on three, and been the chairman of two, United States judicial conference committees. As a member of the Committee on International Judicial Relations of the Judicial Conference, he has taught and participated in domestic and foreign conferences on the American legal system. In part because of Judge George's efforts, the Russian federation has adopted an administrative structure for their judiciary similar to that used in the United States. Judge George has also been asked to review draft constitutions from a number of independent states that were formerly members of the Soviet Union. Judge George has served as one of twenty-seven members of the Judicial Conference of the United States, and has served as a member of its six-member executive committee. The Judicial Conference is essentially the board of directors of the entire federal judiciary, and the executive committee deals with problems of the federal judiciary when the conference is not in session.

Judge George has also served as a member of the Judicial Council of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. In addition he is and has been active on a number of international committees and boards. He frequently lectures in the U.S. and abroad on various legal topics and has published a number of articles in legal periodicals.

Judge George has also been very active in civic and Church service and service to BYU. He has been especially active in programs for the handicapped, serving as president of the Clark County Association for Retarded Children, now known as Opportunity Village, and was instrumental in acquiring property and funding for a new school. He has served as a member of the board of directors of the Boulder Dam Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America and president of the local chapter and former member of the national board of trustees of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He was a director of the Small Business Advisory Council and served as chairman of the Nevada State Apprenticeship Council. He has served as a bishop, high councilor, teacher, and regional and multiregional welfare agent for the Church. He has been on the board of directors and president of the BYU Alumni Association, the Board of Visitors for the J. Reuben Clark Law School, and the National Advisory Council for the Marriott School. He has been a recipient of the Jurist of the Year Award, the Liberty Bell Award for public service, the Boy Scouts of America Silver Beaver Award, and the BYU Alumni Distinguished Service Award.

Judge George's remarkable record of public service and his distinguished national and international reputation as a member of the federal judiciary was recently publicly recognized when the new federal courthouse in Las Vegas, Nevada, was named the Lloyd D. George United States Courthouse.

In 1956 Lloyd married LaPrele Baudouin, whom he met when they were students at BYU. LaPrele is known in Las Vegas for her special gifts in producing musical and arts programs and for her participation in musical and drama productions. Her work in presenting the Las Vegas Christmas Nativity each year has brought special recognition and favorable attention to the Church in Las Vegas. Lloyd and LaPrele have four children and thirteen grandchildren.

For his many years of devotion to his family, his church, his community, and the country, for his extraordinary record of service and his judicial contributions, Brigham Young University is pleased to present to Lloyd Dee George this Presidential Citation and Medallion.

Significance of the Academic Costume

The significance of the academic costume is determined especially by the sleeves and hoods.

Doctors wear the round bell sleeve; the gown is faced down the front and barred on the sleeves with black velvet or color indicating the degree; the doctor's hood is large. The doctor may choose to wear the gold tassel on the cap.

Masters wear the long, closed sleeve, with a slit near the upper part of the arm; the master's hood is of more moderate size.

Bachelors wear the long or pointed sleeve. The color of the tassel indicates whether the degree is in the field of arts (white), fine arts (brown), music (pink), or science (golden yellow).

HONORARY DOCTORAL DEGREE

Kim Bryce Clark

Kim Bryce Clark's influence on business education has been felt well beyond the halls of Harvard Business School, where he has been dean for the last six years. As a catalyst for change, Dean Clark helped the nation's most recognized business school regain its prominence and reach new levels of excellence. His understanding of technology and vision for the future have ignited Harvard's transformation into a technology-enabled proving ground for future business leaders.

In 1996, when Kim Clark was appointed dean of the almost one-hundred-year-old Harvard Business School, he faced a daunting task. The school at which he had been teaching for eighteen years had begun to slip in the rankings, and its reputation had lost some of its luster. Reporters and recruiters claimed the Harvard Business School was failing to prepare its students with the technological skills and knowledge necessary to meet the demands of a changing economy.

However difficult the task, Kim Clark was no stranger to the challenges he inherited at Harvard. He had been introduced to the organization's culture nearly three decades before as a freshman. Eighteen years old and feeling lost, Kim Clark struggled to balance a part-time job cleaning dormitory rest rooms with the rigorous demands of premedical course work. He was soon completely overwhelmed and seriously considered leaving Harvard. He had already made one of the defining decisions of his life—choosing to serve a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. So when he was called to serve in Germany, he left Harvard uncertain whether he would ever return.

Like many young missionaries, Kim Clark both lost and found himself on his mission. In addition to maturing intellectually and spiritually, he was introduced to what would become his life's passion: teaching.

After returning home from Germany, Kim Clark enrolled at BYU, where he met Sue Hunt. They were married in 1971. With the support of his new bride, Kim Clark returned to Harvard. He completed his bachelor's degree in economics in only three years, winning the department prize for best honors thesis and graduating magna cum laude with the school's highest honors in economics.

Four years later Kim Clark earned his master's and doctorate degrees, both in economics, from Harvard, and he became an assistant professor at Harvard Business School. "I knew I liked to teach, and I knew I liked to talk," he says. "I thought, 'What a great idea: They actually pay you to do this.'" Robert H. Hayes, the man who hired Kim Clark, recalls his impression of the young economist as "terribly bright" and "curious about everything."

Kim Clark became a full professor in 1987 and was named the chair of the Technology and Operations Management Group in 1990. In 1996 he was appointed dean of the Harvard Business School.

Characterized as a soft-spoken, dedicated, and decisive scholar, Kim Clark's skills, attributes, and actions have earned him the respect of students, peers, and the business press. Respected by his colleagues for his integrity and devotion to his faith, he has been tagged "a straight arrow who neither drinks nor smokes."

Students recognize Dean Clark as quick moving and open to suggestions. Once a student of his approached him and suggested he include a mock product development exercise in the course curriculum. Used to having her ideas dismissed or only partially implemented after long deliberation, the student was surprised when six weeks later Dean Clark's entire course had been redesigned around the development of mock products.

Dean Kim Clark is also respected by his peers. "Not only is he perhaps the most respected management educator in the country today, but he is a man of great integrity, faith, and wisdom," says Dean Ned C. Hill of the Marriott School of Management. Michael Spence, former dean of Stanford University's School of Business, adds, "He is a scholar, a dedicated teacher, a people person. And he is moving decisively."

When Kim Clark was named dean, outsiders questioned that a man who had been with the university more than twenty-five years could have the ability to change the course of the school. Those who knew Kim Clark rallied under his leadership as he set a course of innovation that included spending more on technology in six months than most business schools have in total annual budget. Asked what makes Dean Clark an outstanding leader, Steven C. Wheelwright, one of Kim Clark's closest colleagues and friends, responds, "His style is open and approachable and involves a lot of conversation." He also adds, "Kim Clark fit the role so naturally that when the search for a new dean was being made, no one who knew both Kim Clark and the university well could imagine anyone other than him being appointed."

In a June 1999 Industry Week article, Kim Clark likened leadership to mountain climbing. "Part of what it means to be a leader is to identify the mountains people should climb," he said, adding that the right mountains are not always the most obvious or easily climbed. He noted that "climbing the mountain involves change—taking people from here to there, where 'there' is at a much higher point and requires significant effort. Climbing . . . inevitably will entail innovating, using new tools, solving problems, and doing things differently."

Kim Clark explained that leadership in this context is not just about rhetoric but about the capacity to solve challenging problems. He said, "The people who embark on this journey need to have trust and confidence in their leaders—they need a sense that if they run into a rough patch, their leader will know what to do, and if hard choices need to be made, their leader will make the choices well."

In summary, Kim Clark said, "Leaders must know how to choose which mountains to climb, how to solve real problems, and how to inspire groups to go—and stay—with them."

Kim Clark's leadership style helped him inspire changes at Harvard Business School ranging from practical to revolutionary. Some of these changes included bringing technology into the heart of the school with all schedules, course materials, and assignments delivered over the campus network; having new interactive multimedia cases used throughout the curriculum; establishing research centers in Silicon Valley, Asia, Latin America, and Europe to deepen and extend the school's work in entrepreneurship and its commitment to global research; and creating new initiatives to sharpen the focus on the importance of values in the learning process, in the educational community, and in leadership.

Says Michael Jensen, Harvard Business School emeritus professor, "Kim Clark understands technology and its power like few people do, and he is catapulting us into the future with it."

In addition to his accomplishments as dean, Kim Clark is a recognized business scholar. He has authored or coauthored thirteen books, including his most recent work, Design Rules: The Power of Modularity, and has published more than fifty articles and book chapters in such publications as the Journal of Production and Operations Management, Administrative Science Quarterly, the Harvard Business Review, and California Management Review. He is widely recognized for his research and expertise in design modularity and the integration of technology and competition in industry evolution with a particular focus on the computer industry.

The father of seven children and the grandfather of three, Kim Clark is a pronounced believer that professional success comes second to building a strong family. According to Steven C. Wheelwright, he makes no separation between his personal and professional belief: "Every time he speaks at graduation he addresses the same topic—what is most important in life. And his list always begins with family."

A husband, father, church member, student, scholar, teacher, and administrator, Kim Clark has inspired innovation, helped remake one of the nation's premier business institutions, and both exemplified and taught the need for lasting values in a changing world.

For his contributions to the expanding world of technology and the field of business education, for his vision and leadership, for his passion for teaching, and for his example to those around him, Brigham Young University is pleased to confer upon Kim Bryce Clark the degree of Doctor of Business and Public Service, honoris causa.

HONORARY DOCTORAL DEGREE

Lucile C. Tate

Biography, says Lytton Strachey in the preface to Eminent Victorians, is "the most delicate and humane of all the branches of the art of writing." "We do not reflect," he adds, "that it is perhaps as difficult to write a good life as to live one."

Lucile C. Tate is best known for her biographies of Elders LeGrand Richards, David B. Haight, and Boyd K. Packer; but it was her father who was the subject when, in her early sixties, she first turned to the writing of biography. Not long after her father's death, Lucile, while in her teens, began to keep a journal. This journal, which she has kept with increasing regularity and dedication for seventy years, grew out of a need to understand, to find consolation and courage, to preserve memory. In 1975, a year older than her father had been when he died, she set out to discover the man she had known only as a child, motivated by "a hunger to know him as only one adult can know another." It was an arduous task. Her father's life had seemed an enigma, but after five years of writing she could conclude: "I finally found my father. Not that I know the actuality of him—what it is like to communicate face to face, to feel his arm about me, or to see enduring love in his eyes—but I know the reality of him. He has come into focus." Designed by illustrator McRay Magleby, Andrew B. Christenson: Mormon Educational Pioneer was published in 1981.

When she undertook to write the life of her father, Lucile Tate did not think of it as an apprenticeship, nor that a year before the book appeared she would already be launched upon another biography. This one was of a different sort, a biography of a living subject, well-known and revered, something of a legend in his own time: the Apostle LeGrand Richards, the oldest living General Authority. Responding to a spiritual prompting, which in due course overcame his reluctance, she approached Elder Richards (her husband's uncle whom she knew only slightly) and offered to write his biography as a service to the Church. Thus began Lucile Tate's labor as a biographer of Apostles. LeGrand Richards: Beloved Apostle, appearing in 1982, was a publishing milestone, going into its second and third printings within weeks. It was followed by David B. Haight: The Life Story of a Disciple in 1987 and Boyd K. Packer: A Watchman on the Tower in 1995.

Lucile Tate has sought, as she writes in one of her prefaces, to produce "a careful assessment and a faithful portrayal." Careful suggests both "meticulous" and "caring." Faithful, while denoting accuracy, a true and honest representation, can also point to the faith and loyalty of the portraitist. The author respects her subjects, reveres their sacred calling, and has earned their trust. She avoids the pitfalls of hagiography; she questions, probes, assesses. Like Plutarch, who argued that the small detail is often more revealing than a grand action, she has a keen eye for an illuminating incident or a telling gesture: "Even in ordinary chores [Elder Packer's] approach is direct and knowing. He picks berries and fruit with two hands." Where others might engage only in apology, she provides context so that the reader may judge; where others might gloss over weakness or controversy, she confronts them with candor and also with faith. We come to trust her judgment, to share her reverence.

The biographies together are a composite portrait of the Quorum and its inner workings. In each biography the voices of other Apostles mingle with and complement the voice of the subject. A senior Apostle, mentor to a junior, passes on knowledge to a subsequent generation; a younger Apostle serves the eldest as his "guardian angel." An initial perception, even antipathy, is modified through closer experience. In Lucile Tate's portraits of the Apostles is a great variety of abilities, views, and temperaments—yet there is a pervasive underlying unity, based upon affection and respect, upon a shared witness and an absolute dedication to the Lord's work. "None among the Brethren," she writes, "has come to this assignment without the deepest soul-searching of which he is capable, knowing that, despite all he is or is not, he is to be a witness of the Savior himself. And it is the Lord who will temper and mold him to the task."

Lucile Christenson was born in Provo on May 17, 1914, shortly before the outbreak of the First World War, to Andrew B. and Sarah Jane Bartholomew Christenson. Her father, after serving as head of several Church academies, had returned from study in Europe to join the BYU faculty in 1911. At the time of Lucile's birth, he had just been appointed principal of Ricks Academy, whose transformation to Ricks College he oversaw during his tenure in Rexburg, before leaving to pursue a variety of business ventures. The family moved often, twelve times in the next seven years. Lucile's favorite childhood home was Starr Ranch in Juab County, which her father and uncles undertook to acquire just after Armistice in 1918. There she could ride her own pony for miles on end. But overextension and misfortune plunged the family into financial ruin from which it never fully recovered until well after the Great Depression, despite her father's most imaginative efforts up to his death in 1931. When she graduated from high school, the prospect of further education seemed remote, but through the encouragement and help of her elder sister and her sister's husband, Lucile was eventually able to enroll at Art Center in Los Angeles, where she won a scholarship and studied commercial art and interior design—fields in which she later successfully freelanced. She married George F. Tate, a trainee in engineering technology with the Army Air Corps, in 1938. During the Second World War, while George was in civil service as an aircraft instrument designer, three of their four children were born: Kathryn (Gledhill), Barbara (Bednarik), and George Sheldon; their youngest, Susan (Laing), followed in 1946.

When their eldest daughter graduated from high school, George and Lucile, neither of whom had had the opportunity to pursue the education they desired, moved to Provo to attend BYU and make it possible for their children to do so. Seeing a couple in their forties among the students at orientation, President Wilkinson invited them to join the meeting for parents, but they called out, "We're freshmen," and stayed put. At one point the parents and the children were all enrolled at BYU, which made for lively dinner-table conversations. All earned degrees; four earned advanced degrees. Lucile Tate graduated in English magna cum laude in 1964 and upon completion of the MA program was hired full-time as an instructor of humanities. Three of her children have also taught at BYU.

In 1972 she resigned her faculty appointment to accompany her husband to the nation's capital, where he had accepted a government position. They were among the first workers in the Washington D.C. Temple, and it was during this time that she began work on the biography of her father, completed after they moved back to Utah. The couple returned to Washington in 1982 as missionaries among refugees displaced by the Vietnam War, before settling again in Utah. Among her other works are a biography of their mission president, industrialist and philanthropist Jon M. Huntsman; her autobiographical For Time and Eternity: The Story of a Marriage (1996); and articles and drawings in academic and Church publications.

Her husband "graduated" from mortality in 1994. Lucile, who had cared for him so tenderly, asked him during his final days to preregister them in the celestial university. At the age of 85 she went again to Washington as a missionary, accompanied by her eighty-year-old sister Margaret Adams. Now 87, Lucile Tate is well into a biography of her elder sister and her husband, who had encouraged her to seek an education. (When she received the telephone call informing her of an honorary doctorate, she was at her computer revising a chapter.) Beyond this, who knows? Toward the end of his life, Elder Bruce R. McConkie quipped that if he could find her in the next world, she might write his mortal life.

For her accomplishment as a biographer, through which she has blessed the Church by mediating the lives of Apostles to its members, for dedicating her life to her family and the Lord, and for exemplifying her university's aim of lifelong learning and service, Brigham Young University is pleased to confer upon Lucile Christenson Tate the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa.

PRESIDENTIAL CITATION

Leon Weston (Pete) and Arline Thelma Harman

Leon Weston (Pete) Harman was blessed with two wonderful mothers: the one who bore him and the one who reared him from the time he was six hours old. They were sisters, whose noble character would mark his own life. When Pete Harman's mother, Grace Harman, died from complications of childbirth and influenza, his Aunt Caroline took the baby to rear as her own. He had no complications with choosing a last name, because his "Aunt Carrie" and his mother had married brothers of the Harman family. Later Caroline's husband died, and she married Pete Harman's father, combining the two families into one with fourteen children. Pete Harman's father later died, and Caroline was both provider and nurturer. Working and managing the family farm in Granger, Utah, serving faithfully in the Church, purified in fires of adversity and the Great Depression, Caroline was a woman of sterling virtues. Hard work, integrity, cooperation, and compassion were among the virtues she instilled in her adopted son. He would use them to become a model of business success and philanthropy.

Pete Harman and his new wife, Arline Thelma Harman, had fifteen dollars left in their bank account when they opened their sixteen-stool restaurant in 1941. At the end of that day's business they were one dollar poorer. They had fourteen dollars in their till. But the legendary Harman work ethic and tenacity began to slowly turn the bottom line black. The Do Drop Inn on 39th South and State Street, Salt Lake City, was making its modest way when the management was cut in half so that Pete Harman could serve his country in World War II. Arline Harman kept the home fires and the warming ovens burning until her husband returned, and the restaurant enjoyed a mini-postwar boom in business.

Hard work, good food, and friendly service were paying off for the Harmans. They were comfortable, but Pete Harman's business and marketing intuition told him he needed a signature dish to establish himself in the restaurant business. His answer came in the form of an authentic Southern gentleman at a Chicago restaurant convention in 1951. They exchanged pleasantries, and the gentleman said, "If I ever get to Salt Lake City, I'll look you up and cook you up some chicken."

Pete Harman smiled and said he would be welcome to come. Surprisingly, he did come. He immediately called for several pressure cookers, went into the kitchen, and began to whip up chicken. Nine hours later he was still whipping. Pete and Arline were leery when in the wee hours of the morning the gentleman finally sat them down and brought out his chicken. Then they savored their first bite, looked at each other, and winked. They borrowed pressure cookers and stocked up to see what the public would say the next Saturday. The response was a resounding "finger-licking" yes, and has been ever since.

As they were preparing for that historic Saturday, Arline Harman said to her husband, "What shall we call this?" Pete Harman said, "Mr. Sanders says he's from Kentucky. Let's call it Kentucky Fried Chicken." They did, and today it is called Kentucky Fried Chicken or KFC in China, Japan, Russia, Europe, Canada, Australia, and all across America.

Pete Harman has said, "It's easy to make money. It's not too hard to manage money. The trick is knowing how to enjoy money." And the Harman's have learned the trick. They enjoy money by spreading it around. They love to invest in people, to give them a chance to work hard, prosper, and enjoy the fruits of their labors. They love to recognize and honor those who give honest service. They take satisfaction in building a corporation that is a model of efficiency, service, and integrity.

The Harmans' concern for people goes beyond business practices. They enjoy donating to hospitals, civic improvements, educational programs, and institutions. Together they endowed a professorship at Stanford University dedicated to children's health. Since 1979 they have supported the Packard Children's hospital in California.

Generous contributions to Brigham Young University have helped build the beautiful museum that brings the best of the arts and fine culture to thousands of students, patrons, and visitors. Their contributions also helped build the Caroline Hemenway Harman Continuing Education Building named for Pete Harman's beloved Aunt Carrie. Hundreds of thousands are blessed each year through the educational programs that go forth from the Harman Building. Some of these programs are sponsored by Pete and Arline Harman, including a conference for deaf youth.

For Pete and Arline Harman's generosity; for their support and appreciation for improvements to business, the arts, and education; for their example of investing in people; and for their promotion of the value of hard work and integrity, Brigham Young University is pleased to present to Leon Weston (Pete) and Arline Thelma Harman this Presidential Citation and Medallion.

PRESIDENTIAL CITATION

Ben Elden Lewis

Ben Elden Lewis has been an accomplished university administrator, businessman, fund-raiser, community benefactor, and Church leader. Along with others, he is credited with building the modern-day Brigham Young University, bringing it from relative obscurity to an internationally recognized institution.

Ben Lewis was born in Mesa, Arizona, on November 6, 1913. However, most of his boyhood days were spent in Salt Lake City. He married Barbara Rae Wootton on October 4, 1944, in the Salt Lake Temple. They raised five children and three foster children. Ben and Barbara Lewis have twenty-six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Serving as the student body president his senior year, Ben Lewis graduated from Brigham Young University with a degree in banking and finance in 1940. He received a master of science degree in 1942 from Denver University in government management. He worked for Hot Shoppes, Inc., later the Marriott Corporation, as the budget director for seven years. Returning to BYU in 1952, Ben Lewis served in the administration for twenty-seven years.

Ben Lewis initially served as assistant to President Wilkinson, then vice president for auxiliary services, and ultimately executive vice president, responsible for all institutional activities except for academic instruction and research. BYU awarded Ben Lewis with the degree of doctor of business, honoris causa, in 1970. His exceptional service as a BYU executive continues to be recognized each year when the outstanding administrator on this campus is given the Ben E. Lewis Management Award.

After his retirement in 1979, Ben Lewis continued his service to BYU as chairman of the Major Gifts Campaign beginning in 1982. For his leadership in BYU athletics, particularly for the construction of the Marriott Center, the LaVell Edwards Stadium, and other facilities, Ben was admitted to the BYU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1991.

Ben was active in community affairs during his years at BYU. In addition to serving on several local boards of directors, he was on the Provo City Planning Commission for seven years, was a member of the Provo Kiwanis Club for twenty-three years, and served on the Provo Chamber of Commerce. Ben was instrumental in the growth of Utah Valley Hospital into today's regional medical center. In 1988, Ben was named Total Citizen of the Year by the Provo/Orem Chamber of Commerce. In 1993 he was recognized as the Senator Reed Smoot Outstanding Citizen of the Year. Earlier this year, Ben and Barbara Lewis were honored by the Sons of Utah Pioneers for their service to the community and their work at BYU.

Always an avid supporter of the youth, Ben has been active in Boy Scout duties since registering as a Tenderfoot in 1925. He achieved his Eagle Scout as a youth, received the Silver Beaver and Provo Peak awards, was president of the Utah National Parks Council, and served on the Council's Executive Committee. On March 17, 2001, he was honored for seventy-five years of service in Scouting.

Despite his weighty university and community duties, family and the Church have always come first. Raised in an LDS home, Ben Lewis served in the Northern States Mission and twice as a stake missionary in Washington, D.C. He was president of the Sharon East Stake for sixteen years, served on the Sunday School general board, and was regional representative to the Twelve. Within weeks of his retirement from BYU, President and Sister Lewis presided over the England London Mission until 1982.

Ben chaired the site selection committee for the Provo Temple and chaired the fund-raising committee and the groundbreaking services committee for both the Provo and Jordan River Temples. He helped develop the concept of the current Missionary Training Center and assisted in the construction of its facilities. Under his direction, BYU Auxiliary Services established business support for MTC programs—a highly efficient system that continues today.

This well-known man sporting his distinctive bow ties has been a major influence on and off campus for the last fifty years. It is with sincere appreciation for his untiring service to the Church, our surrounding communities, and this institution that Brigham Young University is pleased to present to Ben Elden Lewis this Presidential Citation and Medallion.
